At Tulane Law School, most scholarships require that the recipient maintain a cumulative Grade Point Average (GPA) of 3.0 or higher in order to retain a scholarship for the following year. The class rank equivalent of a 3.0 GPA for the Class of 2016 (Students matriculating in 2013) was top 74.52% at the close of the Spring 2014 semester.

For the purposes of scholarship renewal, GPAs are measured at the end of each spring semester, so all scholarships awarded during the admissions process are guaranteed for two semesters, provided that the student remains enrolled.

If a student does not achieve a 3.0 GPA as of the end of the first year of law school, the scholarship is renewed in the amount of 50% for the following year. Accordingly, no student has their scholarship eliminated after one year of law school.

If a second-year student whose scholarship has been decreased achieves a cumulative GPA of 3.0 or higher as of the end of the second year of law school, the scholarship can revert to its original, full amount for the third year of law school. Thus, some who lose 50% of the scholarship during the second year may receive the full scholarship for the third year of law school. As per the ABA data disclosure requirements, the data in the chart above reflects only what happened after each student’s first year of law school, not in the subsequent year.
